

Author's Acknowledgments (11-01-11)

First of all, I need to acknowledge the abundance of support from my wife, Janet Schoen Smith, who was never covetous of the thousands of hours I spent on this project, who traveled with me to Davis Floyd sites in Virginia, Indiana, and Florida, and who was ever capable of solving any technical issues I had with our computer and laptop. I also need to acknowledge that as an author she proceeded me with the writing and publication of a history of Silver Heights Camp in Silver Hills on the west side of New Albany, which church camp she has attended every year since she was two years old.

Second, I would like to thank the skilled staff of the Stuart Barth Wrege Indiana History Room in the New Albany Floyd County Public Library in New Albany, Indiana for answering almost every inquiry I made of them and steering me to the right resources. The members of the staff are Beth Nolan, Betty Menges, Peggy Roberson, Lynn Rueff, and Nancy Strickland. Thanks are also owed to their predecessors who over the years created a research "gem," without which this biography could never have been written. Sometimes the only way to find information is to look through books where a lot of information is secreted. Some times indexes help but not always.

Third, I must thank Jim Holmberg, curator of collections at the Filson Historical Society in Louisville, Kentucky, whom I first met on the Lewis and Clark Trail in Bismarck, North Dakota in 1999, for patiently listening from time to time to updates about my biography. If I had Jim's writing and research skills my biography would be on the New York Times' best seller list by now. I also thank the Filson Historical Society for their library and its staff in helping me to write this biography.

Fourth, I must thank Kathy Fisher, a blood first cousin of mine, once removed, Department Head of the Frederick Porter Griffin Center for Local History and Genealogy at the Harrison County Public Library in Corydon, Indiana for her help in guiding me in my research in that facility.

Fifth, I must thank several friends who were ever encouraging to me in this project: Professional historian and realtor "extraordinaire" in Jeffersonville, Indiana who wanted to help me more but who faithfully endured the untimely sickness and death of his wife, Mickey, in 2010 and then underwent serious health problems himself in 2011 and died; Steve Pearce, my Greenville, Indiana friend, whom I have known since childhood and who is one of the best public speakers I know, for his review and comments on the biography; Dr. Guy Wall, wordsmith "extraordinaire" and retired Education Professor Emeritus at Indiana University Southeast in New Albany, Indiana, with whom I have served for the last three years and eight months on the Board of Trustees of Floyd Memorial Hospital and Health Services in New Albany, Indiana, for his support and encouragement in writing this biography; Alex Lukens for the information she furnished me about Davis Floyd and his family, but especially for alerting me to an auction in Cincinnati, Ohio where I acquired a War of 1812 saber and scabbard that had belonged to Davis Floyd's adopted son, Gabriel Jones Floyd, who was born in 1795 the year after his mother, 14 years of age, a widow, and pregnant, married Davis Floyd.

Sixth, to my son, Eric, who accompanied me to Davis Floyd sites in western Indiana including Vincennes, Ft. Knox II, and the battle grounds at Tippecanoe, near Lafayette, Indiana, and Cumberland Gap in Kentucky, and who was my faithful companion when we followed the Lewis and Clark Trail from Clarksville, Indiana where the expedition began to the Western (Pacific) ocean and back, which over much of the trail we flew "Cessna 68 Charlie." Also, to my daughter, Lara Smith Lawton who had me speak to her third grade students in Spring, Texas several times about Lewis and Clark and the Floyd family's connection therewith. And also, to my great-niece, Kelsey Adams, who invited me to her fifth grade class in Brandenburg, Kentucky, in which she was a student, to speak to her class on Lewis and Clark.

Seventh, to the Rotary Clubs of Jeffersonville, New Albany, and Clarksville, Indiana who heard my story on the local connection of Lewis and Clark to Southern Indiana and the Davis Floyd story and to the historical clubs in Charlestown, Clarksville, and New Albany who heard the same stories.

And eighth, to my helpful Florida connection, Dr. Joe Knetsch, a government analyst II with the Bureau of Survey and Mapping, a Division of State Lands in Florida, who furnished me a lot of information on Davis Florida and La Florida.
